4. What part of the fashion system do you see yourself in? (200 words)

We are actively encouraging applicants with diverse perspectives and experiences, who collectively are skilled in fields such as fashion design, technology, communication, supply chains, human rights, environmental stewardship and business.

The Next Gen Assembly will collectively represent different parts of the fashion system as identified in Global Fashion Agenda's Fashion CEO Agenda priorities: Respectful and Secure Work Environments; Better Wage Systems; Resource Stewardship; Smart Material Choices; Circular Systems

5. Which of the five Fashion CEO Agenda priorities do you wish to represent with the theme 'valuing the rights of nature'? (Choose 1-2)

- Respectful and Secure Work Environments
- Better Wage Systems
- Resource Stewardship
- Smart Material Choices
- Circular Systems

6. Explain how your chosen priority area(s) aligns with the theme and reflects your commitment to integrating the rights of nature into the fashion industry's future. (200 words)

7. Additional task: Personal video (Maximum 1.5 minutes)

Reflecting on the theme of nature as outlined in the concept note, share how your experiences, values, or perspectives connect with this vision of reimagining fashion to prioritize the needs of nature.

In your response, consider exploring one or more of the following:

- Mandatory: How would you like to use your voice as part of the Next Gen Assembly?
- How you interpret the relationship between fashion and nature in cultural, emotional, or systemic terms.
- Your thoughts on how fashion can respect and value the rights of nature.
- Any experiences or ideas you have related to the key themes: Mitigation Hierarchy, Interspecies Justice, Nature-Centred Design Thinking, or Biodiversity Protection and Regeneration

Feel free to include examples of your past work, studies, or personal reflections that illustrate your commitment or interest in this area.

Please submit your video as an attachment along with a completed application form to academy@globalfashionagenda.org and with 'Next Gen Assembly 2025 Application [Your Name]' in the subject field.
